

Dear Friend,

Our children have been immersed into a new way of life that none of us could have ever imagined. Interactions with friends and other personal exchanges are limited if they happen at all. Now, we are beginning to step into uncharted territory, trying to determine how to safely open up our schools and keep our children and families safe. All of us were hoping that this pandemic would have been under control by now, but instead, we find ourselves working hard to adjust and do the best for our children under difficult circumstances.

We also understand that there are parents who rely on our programs, and we keep this at the forefront of our minds in all of our decision-making. I, along with my colleagues Moira Weir, CEO of United Way and Chara Fisher Jackson, CEO of Preschool Promise, came together to write an opinion piece on the value of Early Childhood Education in our community and how we must prioritize our children, especially now.

I want to invite you all to attend our Virtual Open House on the Head Start Facebook page, Thursday, August 13, at 3:30 p.m. to get a better understanding of our plans to move forward and how families can register their children for our Head Start Program.

We will continue to make it through this together.

Best,
 Mark B. Lawson, Esq.
 President/CEO

OUR VIEW: Funding for safe, affordable child care must be priority for lawmakers
 - Moira Weir, Chara Fisher Jackson, and Mark Lawson

The success of our nation returning to work and reviving our economy is wholly dependent on one industry – child care.

As Congress considers a stimulus package to breathe life into our pandemic recovery, it must include significant stabilization funding for an industry on the brink of collapse. Without a healthy, safe child care industry, parents will be unable to return to work, threatening their financial stability, the business success of their employer, and the economic recovery our nation desperately needs.

Here in Greater Cincinnati, where United Way invested heavily in early education for more than two decades (at least $125 million in past 20 years), where we have a world-class Head Start program ($26 million annually), where the community passed the Preschool Promise levy ($15 million annually) to specifically support early childhood education, our hard work is threatened in the wake of a pandemic that led many child care operators to close and others to barely hang on, with lower enrollment rates, less revenue and increased expenses.
